seeing defeat to be inevitable, ordered his men to stand their ground as long as they possibly could, but inasmuch as he was lame he would go then. Like the Russians in Schastopol, he pops away with great spirit while the contest is at long shot, but when the Redan and Mameleva of his positions are a scalled and the fight elon of his positions are assailed and the fight is a hand-to-hand one, he suddenly discovers that he is in the hands of the Democratic Stat Committee, and that they have arranged for him to be in some other place just at that

Las, cunning has not. If he dare not go before the beople with Lixcoln he may at least put his refusal to do so on some other ground than want of courage. It is possible for even the veriest potroon to quibble. There is no law against so on some other ground than want of courage. It is possible for even the veriest politroon to quitbble. There is no law against getting out of an ugly scrape with a whole skin, if a man is able to do it. The Supreme Court has not yet decided that a Democrat is bound to stand up and be riddled from the crown of his head to the soles of his feet, simply because a "Black" Republican invites him to that kind of sport. There is ample verge for a quitbble without endangering the Union or damaging the Constitution; and so Mr. Douglas notifies Mr. Lincoln that he is in the hands of a committee who object to the proposed arrangement.

If we remember rightly, in 1840 Mr. Doug-in the hands of a committee who object to the proposed arrangement.

If we remember rightly, in 1840 Mr. Douglas was very severe upon Gen. Harrison, then a candidate for the Presidency, for putting himself into the hands of a committee. He was wont to describe that venerable man and distinguished soldier under the simile of a menagarie animal, confined in an iron cage, and exhibited around the country, whenever and wherever his keepers thought proper. Is it possible that the Judge fell so desperately in love with the picture, that he now voluntarily gives himself up to be the chief figure in its second production? Or is this sinking of the will and personality of Judge Douglas into a committee an afterthought.

But suppose Lincoln's challenge had reached Douglas before the committee had muzzled and caged him; would it have been accepted? Not at all. Douglas would in that ease have replied, "Wait until I can have an interview with my committee. I have been acted to the state since November, and know not what arfangements my friends have made for me. I regret that you are so precipitate in this matter. Wait. There is time enough yet,"

The fact is, Douglas never intended to make the canvass in company with Lincoln. A peddler of imitation wares never travels in company with a vender of the genuine article. Douglas will take his sophiistries and misrepresentations where they will not be

We are advised from Washington that the President has taken the precaution to appoint an agent to proceed to the Frazer River diggings, whose business will be to prevent citizens of the United States from coming into collision with the British authorities.

We were in Wisconsin a couple of days, lately, and know what we write is true. The Bemocracy are with Douglas unanimously; and so are almost every body else. — Times

The Secretary says to President Martinez: You have insulted this Government, by withholding the treaty after pledging yourself to General Lamar that you had sent it by special messenger; then you afterward assigned as a reason for not having sent it, that you had written an autograph letter to President Buchanan, asking him to submit certain modifications of it, which letter you never wrote.

We demand, as the only reparation you can make, the written treaty as ratified by the Asse biy. With regard to the rights of citizens of Nicaragua, Gen. Cass tells President Martines that his government would not submit to any arbitrary action of Nicaragus, that if that country was devoid of t. iounals, the Caoinet at Washington had no other resource but to decide for themselves, and that therefore a proper naval force had been dispatched to both sides of the Ishmus.

I claim to be a Republican of the old school. I am a State's Rights man of the school of Jefferson, John Tayler of Caroline, and of Nathaniel Macon of North Carolina. What then must I think of a man like Judge Douglas, who claiming to be a Democrat, esponses the most edious and centralizing doc-trines of the old Federal party? When Judge Douglas repudiated the Lecompton villany I had great hope that he would disvillaby I has great top a debanched and cor-rupted party, which has step by step aban-doned every principle held dear by its found-ers, and at length thrown off all disguise of main element and dissolution of the Units a possible contingency. Fee people understand that JOHN ADAMS, TROMAS JEFFERSON and JAMS MADISON were called Republicans in their day, and that their principles on the fractions. tion of infamy that this old Federalist should signalize his accession to the office by pro-claiming the cardinal tener of Federalism, that the Supreme Court is the sovereign and final arbiter of Constitutional questions, whose decisions bind alike the co-ordinate eid by the Republican party of Illinois in 558. Tet such are the facts, as shown by abun-ant extracts from the writings of Jappanson ments of the Government, and the States. And it is singular that Mr. Jefferson States. And it is singular that Mr. Jefferson predicted this as a consequence of the dishaudment of the old Federal party, and the numerous accessions from its disjects membra to the Democratic Republican party.
Will you allow me to place in juxta-position, in your columns, some of the Federalism of Mr. Douglas, and the general Republicanism of Jefferson, John Taylor of Caroline, Jackson and others.

Tot have no draubt published the speech of Mr. Douglas, and at his recent reception in your city, but for the purpose indicated. I hope you will allow the re-publication of the following long extracts. Mr. Douglas said:

"The other preposition advanced by Mr. Lincoln in his apecale consists in a crussed against the Suprema Court of the United States on the ground of the Dred Scott decision. On this question also I desire to say to you apogive-cally, that I take direct or distinct issue with him. I have no warfare to make on the Supreme Court of the United States on the Supreme Court of the United States (applause), either on account of that or any other decisions est tenets of Federalism, and proclaims doc-trines concerning the powers of the Supreme Court which Jappason, Manson, Randolff, John Tation of Carolina, Namanus, Macon, and a host of the opponents of Federalism, denounced as tending directly to the estab-lishment of an irresponsible authority and to the overthrow of all constitutional govern-ment. The Secretary of the Hartford Con-vention published a history of that body in 1853, in which he denounces Mr. Jappason in almost the identical language which Doro-tas is now employing against Lincotn. Jun-manor said that the Supreme Court him. I have no warfare is make on the Su-preme Court of the United States [applause], sither on account of that or sky other decisions which ther have pronounced from that bench. The constitution of the United States has pro-vided that the power of the Gevernment—and the constitutions of the several States had the ame provision—shall be divided into three departments: he secutive, legislative and ju-diciary. The right and the province of ex-pounding the constitution and the construction of law, is vested in the judiciary established by the constitution. As a lawyer, I feel at liberty to appear before a court and construction of law, is vested in the judiciary established by principle of law while the question is pending before the tribunas; but when a decision is made, my private opinion, your opinions, all our opinions must yield to the majesty of that authoritative adjusication; and I wisk you to bear in mind, that this involves the great prin-ciples upon which our rights and our liberties he same temptations and the same influences which guide other men, and that the court of altimate and final jurisdiction existed right-haly in the masses of the people. This was no new theory, and was not claimed as such by our obsitions must yield to the majesty of that authoritative adjustation; and I wish you to bear in mind, that this involves the great praciples upon which our rights and our liberties and our property. All depend. What security have you for your property—for your reputations—for your personal rights, unless the courts are to be upheld and thair decisions respected, when ouce shally rendered by the highest tribunal known to the constitution.

"Ido not choose, therefore, to go into an argument with Mr. Luncoln in reviewing the various decisions that the Supreme Court again and either upon the Dred Scott case or any other, and have no idea of appealing from the decision of the Supreme Court upon a constitutional question to a decision of a town meeting. The decision of the highest tribunal of a nation on the constitution of the country, must be final matili is has been exversed by equally high authority. Hence I am opposed to this dectrine of Mr. Lincoln's, by which he proposes to take an appeal from the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States upon these high constitutional questions, to a Free Soil or Republican caucus situated in the country—yes, or to any other caucus or town meeting. I respect the decision of that august tribunal, I shall bow in delerence to the I am a law-abiding man; I will sustain the constitution of my country as our fathers have made it, and I will yield obedience to the laws, whether I like them or not, as I find them on the stante book. I will sustain the judicial tribunal and the constituted authorities in all matters within the pale of their ged him with demagogism and reworld," to a rabble in the streets.

Precisely such is the ground taken by arty hold that in the Dred Scott case the Supreme Court pronounced a wicked and unlaw-ful decision. It does not follow because rulings of a justice's court may be overruled by a superior tribunal and both together be hed by the people. But Mr. Douglasses up the old Hartford Convention argumas is not a Federalist? And we

The glory of Bagdad seems almost as complete a myth as the tales of the Arabian Nights. Tarkey is dying, and will soon be dead. In Barope it only exist through the sufferance or mutual jealousies of the leading powers. The Great Mogul Empire has sunt to deat and athes, its last wretched octogenarian representative being new under squiteses of banishment to some desolate place in Southern Africa.

But underneath all this hopeless decay and a solation, like glowing coate beneath a covering of askes, burns the old split of devocition to a false faith and of contempt for all who bear a Christian name. Never was there witnessed as more malignant, externimating outburst of this spirit than the world saw and abuddered at last year in India, intensified by the hope of resitablishing the Mogul Empire. The moving inpulse in this case came from Persia but the contest ofnoce begun, it spread with almost electric swiffness to every Mohammedan country and trike, inpulring very some of its arms against the Christians. And to this case we are disposed to attribute in part the murderous outrages that have been committed upon the Missionaries in Syris and Arabia within the last few months, beginning with the attack upon the family of the contest oftone begun, it spread and Arabia within the last few months, beginning with the attack upon the family of the contest oftone begun, it spread with a sum against the Christian readily of the Supreme Court. State ladicial power, as myring from state society, is not independent, state legislative and axecutive power cannot be independent, because all rest upon the same foundation; and because if a Sapreme Faderal Judiciary can control State coerts, it can also control State Legislatures and Executives. Thus, if a Federal form of government would be rejected, though it was established, and a national government would be rejected. "

"As the extension of legislative federal power to tarstion did not destroy the sovereign power of the States to tax, nor invest Congress with a supreme power to annul State. be is responsible only to the courts of justice; and, further, that the Secretary, as an officer of this Government, can only abridge him of that right upon the broad ground that the privileges of the citizens of this country are only to be enjoyed upon the sufferance of Executive discretion. Mr. Lamar says that "it would be difficult to conceive of an act more wisely patriotic than would be that of sending native negroes to the Northern States," and he thinks a single Douglas and Lincoln.

The railroad people had their meeting at Cleveland day before yesterday, and decided on making the through passenger rates from all points the same as by the Erie road, and reights one dollar less than by the Erie. The arrangement to take effect on Monday next.

There is a degree of philanthropy in this. Those having property to ship may consider themselves lucky. Freights from New York to Chicago are contracted now by the Central at 75.50 per ton, all the way by rail. We presume that the Erie road makes similar contracts, which would reduce the carriage of a ton of reight for this long distance to $6.50. That is, the roads will carry a ton of freight for just about one-third what they charge for a passenger. The passenger loads and unloads himself, does not, under ordinary circumstances, burst open on the way, or cost the companies anything for shakage, stealage or rateage. He don't turn up in warehouses, and involves no expense for handling. Yet the human freight—averaging about 140 lbs—pays $20 for being "hauled" the same distance over which 2,00 lbs of goods are to be carried for $6.50. We should like to see the profits of the companies at these rates estimated, and the result gives in a mathematical formula. The problem should be stated something in this wise: If it cost and the stated something in this wise: If it cost and the stated something in this wise: If it cost and the stated something in this wise: If it cost and the stated something in this wise: If it cost and the stated something in this wise: If it cost and the stated something in this wise: If it cost and the stated something in this wise: If it cost and the stated something in this wise: If it cost and the stated something the stated something the stated something in this wise: If it cost and the stated something t "Controversies may arise under the constitu-tion between political departments in relation to their powers; between the legislative and treaty-making departments; between the Senate and House of Representatives; between the Presi-dent and Senate; or between the Sinte and

House of Representatives; between the President and Senate; or between the State and Pederal Gepartments; but they would not be case in law and equity, nor it any poses to decide them gives to the federal indicary.

This is sufficiently explicit and to the point, Col. Taylor was a great authority with the old Jeffersonian Democracy, but his trenchant logic is rank treason now a days. Almost any passage from his two or three volumes would condemn the modern Democratic creed, but the above must suffice.

I might fill your paper with pertinent extracts from the debate on the repeal of the Judiciary Act of the preceding Congress, in which the Republican members indulged in very free comments upon the character of the Judiciary, and scouted the flea that its authority was paramount to that of the eo-ordinate departments of the Government. These and similar views, at war with the modern "democratic" superstition as to the authority of federal courts, were expressed by Mr. Jackson of Ga., Stevens, Thompson, Marm of Va., Mr. Cooke of Tenn., Mr. T. Davis of Ky., Wm. B. Giles of Va., a great lawyer and stateman, who maintained that Congress may abolish the Supreme Court. At another time I may favor you with more of his views. Similar views were advanced by Robt, Williams of North Carolina, to John Randolph of Roanoke, who hurled his anathemas at the Efeort as an irresponsible power, and denouced the Mr. Charles A. L. Lamar, of Savannah, Ga., who had applied through Messrs. Lafitte & Co. to the Collector of the port of Charleston for a clearance to the coast of Africa, "for the pur-pose of taking on Board African emigrants, in laws, and returning with the same to the Un-ted States," and was refused under instructions from the Secretary of the Treasury, has replied at some length to Mr. Cobb, denying his author-it yto refuse the application. Mr. Lamar claims view were advanced by Robt, Williams of North Carolina, to John Randolph of Roanoke, who hurled his anathemas at the Entre as an irresponsible power, and denounced the doctrine of the Federalists which would invest them with authority to settle constitutional questions; by the venerable Nathaniel Macon, the Cate of North Carolina, by Joseph H. Nieholson of Maryland, and by John Bacon of Mass.

The Federal members all ralied in defense of the Court, and maintained the kientical views which are now promulgated by Buchanan, Donglas, and other leaders of the degenerate and corrupt Democracy.

In the discussions upon the application of Mathew Lyon for the restoration of a thousand dollars fine paid by him in 1798, for violating the sedition law, the same views were reiterated by the Republicans and controverted by the Federalists. The memorial of Lyon came up at several successive sessions. In 1818 it was pressed with great caruestness by the Hon. Jno. J. Crittenden of Ky., then, perhaps, the youngest, as he is now the oldest member of the Senate. I commend his manly Republican views to all true Republicans of the present day, but more especially to his American and Whig triends. He maintained that the sedition law was unconstitutional, and had so been decided by the people; and insisted that their interpretation should be carried out by reparation to those who had

"So, also, would I not be mistaken in another matter. In disclaiming the purpose, upon this occasion, of engaging in the alare trade, it may be inferred that at any time I would avoid the imputation of such an enterprise; but this is not the fact. Under ordinary circumstances I would not violate the laws. I am pleased, when I can, to bonor and sustain them; but this law prohibiting the slave trade was not adopted by the intelligence, certainly not be the genius of the South. It is enforced by the sentiment of another and hostile section of the country. It is sustained by persons who have more regard for the people of the properties, and the truth. It is along the section than the truth. It is along the section than the truth. It is along the section than the truth is a section of the country. It is not not the section of the country is a law as the section than the truth. It is along the section of the country that is the section of the country that is the section of the section than the truth. It is along the section of the country that is the section of the country that is the section of the country that it is not a section of the section of the country is a section of the section of t ment. He said:

"To each of them, (referring to the sufferers under the act,) and to every citizen of the United States, the Constitution of the United States had guaranteed certain rights which had been violated by that law. This guarantee entitled them to indemnity in cases wherein those rights were violated; of this indemnity the decisions of courts ought not to deprive them. If they do there is no redeeming apirit in the Constitution. Legal sanctions cannot violate Constitution. Legal sanctions cannot violate Constitution provisions. The judiciary is a valuable part of the Government, and ought to be highly respected; but it is not infallible. The Constitution is our guide—our supreme law. Blind homage can never be rendered by freemen to any power. In all cases of alleged violations of the Constitution it was for Congress to make a just discrimination. In doubtful cases, he said, he would not interfere; but, when the Constitution for bade a law he would not besitate for the action of the constitution of the Nathaniel Macon said : "According to some gentlemen we were to regard the judiciary more than the law, and both more than the Constitution. It was a mis-both more than the Constitution. The Niegara Fatts Gazette says the Can. dian Mr. Doughas and his friends will everywhere, during the canvess, be confronted with these authoritative expositions of genuine Republican Democracy. If he sees fit to set aside authority of Jefferson, and his compeers, and of all the old school Republicans down to General Jackson and his times, well and good. But I insist that he and Büchanan, whether united or divided, have no right to claim fraternity of the old school Republicans, while they stand upon the old Federal platform. These authorities should be thrust in their teeth daily and weekly, antil-from very shame they are compelled to confess that they have no longer any claim to be called Jeffersonian Democrats.

I wish to call attention to another point, vis: that whereas Messrs. Buchanan and Douglas give us merely dickness, while they merely deal in old federal dogmas, in which Mr. Buchanan was educated; the citations I have given from Jefferson, John Taylor and others, are at once dogmatical and argumentative. We have, then, on the one hand, the filppant dogmatism of Buchanan and Douglas; and on the other the philosophy of Jefferson and John Taylor. I am willing to rest the case here, without any attempt to combat the anti-Republican, centralizing doctrines of federalism revived, by any reasoning of my own. I venture to predict that they will find it easier to dogmatize than it with the declares that "independence can be "gras el nowhere but with the people in mass;" and I ask the reader to confrast it with the sneers and tunnts with which Mr. Douglas sits and it ask the reader to confrast it with the sneers and tunnts with which Mr. Douglas sits and it was the very height of presumption.

Gordon was of old a Whig of the State Rights school. -The editor of the Oxford (Me.) Democrat, Hon, J. J. Perry, whose seat in the House

Representative adjoined that of Gen. Quitman, says of the latter:

"He was always free to converse upon the slavery question. In conversation he once remarked to us, that as a Southern man he should always stand up boldly in defence of Southern institutions; that he had no words of censure for the Northern man who boldly contronted him upon this question; but that he had the greatest contempt for doughfaces. This was characteristic of the man. There was no deception, by poerisy, or half way work about him. Although politically one of the most ultra Southerners, we have as laways continually and ourerners, yet he was always gentlemanly and con

Fortunately, Mrs. General Harrison has been with her son, Hon. J. Scott Harrison, for some time, and knew nothing of the fire. She has lately been extremely feeble, and for a few days her life was despaired of. We were happy to learn yesterday that she was much better.
The various members of Col. Taylor's family were eased for brits neighbors and taken to the the learn yesterday that she was much better.

The various members of Cot. Taylor's family were cared for bythe neighbors and taken to their houses, where they will remain temporarily. Almost everything was lost. A little clothing a and furniture and a few paintings were saved, but everything else was consumed. There were many relies of General Harrison, such as the banners presented to him by the ladies of Indianapolis and Ciocinnati, various military decorations, &c., which have thus perished. And the public has sustained a great loss in the cestruction of a mass of valuable correspondence and pape s reaching from General Harrison's first entry into public life till the unimely close of his career. These papers were stored in one of the garrets, and only a table at a two were saved. There was no insurance on the property. The lamous residence of General Harrison was beautifully situated, about 300 yards back from the river and facing it, in the midst of a clump of fine trees, chiefly locusts. A row of these trees stood tall and green in front of the house like settinels, and yesterday they seemed as if they had been killed at their posts, for their branches were burned, their leaves shrivelled and their whole appearance was moribund. The residence itself consisted of the central log cabin, which has become so famous in our political history, whose mention even yet makes a glow of the spirit of '40, was the second built at this place. The first was that built by the patentee and first settle John Cleves Symmes, narison to the log color was of the genuine and unadulterated kind, built of highe logs, with gigantic stone of impers, and finished in the backwoods sty.s. The cabin, however, was long since clapboarded, and the wings which were added, being built in modern style, the whole presented a symmetrical appearance.

As tien. Harrison's family grew numerous, additions were made to the cabin, till the structure grew to a length of some fifty feator more, and a proportional width. When asked why he did not build a new house upon the hill that rises back of the present building, iden. Harrison replied that he found the cabin there, and had added to it as occasion required, until he had added so much, that it hardly seemed worth while to desert it altogether.

Three il the prayers we have taught her Grad d from Winter to Spring; Oh, you should listen my daughter Saying them all in a string;

Kitty—ah, how my heart blesses Kitty, my lily, my rose! Wary of all my carcases. Chary of all take bestows.

Kitty loves quietest places, Whispers sweet sermons to chairs And, with the gravest of faces. Teaches old Carlo his prayers.

Nought man come near it to wake it, Noise number of give it alarm: And when she sleeps, she must take it Into her bed, on her arm.

Matronly, motherly creature!
Oh, what a dell she has built Guiltiess of figure or feature—
Out of her ewn little quilt!

Kitty is shy of a caller, Uttering never a word; But when alone in the parior, Talks to herself like a pird.

Kitty is contrary, rather, And with a comical smile, Mutters "I won't," to her father Eyeing h m slyly the white.

An exquisitely youthful, and simple costume, consisted of a robe of white muslin, with three skirts edged with ruches of sky blue ribboh. It was accompanied by a mantilla of muslin entirely plain, surrounded only by a trimming of the same a vielle. The bonnet was of white crape with a border of sky blue silk, and crown of puffed crape, separated by a band of silk. A wreath of Pompadour roses almost encircled the crown, and one was placed in the centre of a blue bow which ornamented the inside.

The characteristics of the season are broad and striking contrass, in both colors and materiuls. To such an extent has this proceeded that the Parisian ladies associate brick color, and the heaviest shades of red, with the color, and the heaviest shades of red, with the lightest of white materials, such as lace an tarletante. The effect is hard and unbecome ing, although it has long been a favorite with Italian Indies.

Plain white is considered extremely appropriate to young married ladies, giving them a pale and interesting appearance.

EQUESTRIAN COSTURE—DESCRIPTION OF PRIMES.

As the season for equestrian exercises is approaching, and especially as the next great contest in which ladies are permitted to display their proficiency, is arranged to take place as early as the 8th of September, a description of a much admired style of riding costume may not be out of place. The habit is of dark green cloth, with a single very long skirt draperied. The corsage is plain pointed, and fastened down the front with green buttons. The sleeves are the "jockey," with undersleeves of cambric gathered into a black band. Collar of page, with black satin neck-tie. Gloves of chamois leather, without gauntlets. Black English beaver hat, and veil of green ganze several shades lighter than the color of the robe. Boots of black satin francais. BY J. G. BOLLAND. Have you seen Annie and Kitty,

At the Convention which is to take place on the 8th of September, on the Long Island race course, the following prizes are to be race course, the following prizes are to be distributed:

First, a superb grand piano; second, an axquisitely chased salver, containing an antique pitcher and pair of goblets to match; third, an elegant ladies' watch, surrounded with diamonds, and with a diamond leaf in the centre, on a ground of dark enamel.

It is greatly to be desired that this graceful and healthful exercise, once considered exclusively many, should become universally practiced by our young women, as nothing adds so much to the acquisition of a certain degree of self-reliance, as constant and fearless riding.

PASHIONS FOR AUGUST.

The fashionable avenues are apparently quite descried, bearing no signs of life, and businees is nearly at as stand still in New York. The height of the season is approaching at the watering places, and all persons with any pretensions to fashion who have not already left town, are rapidly preparing to sustain their respectability, by at least a few weeks sojourn at some well known resort. In the large commercial houses the business of "taking stock" has commenced, and when concluded will be the signal for those of the merchants who still remain in town to join their families in their cool retreats, forgeting for a time the cares and perplexities of the past year.

In the midst of the present stagnation, the greatest hopes are entertained of the coming fall and winter, the excellence of the crops almost insuring a complete recovery from the late mercantile disasters.

The continued stringency in monetary affaire, and the caution felt in returning to former habits of profusion, is, however, most distinctly seen in the almost total abandonment of lavish and reckless expenditure; very few costly luxuries are in demand, and dressmakers complain that bills which formerly approached from three to five hundred makes the advice in her lectures concerning frequent and active exercise, in order to obtain and preserve a pure and beautiful complexion.

The custom of wearing small bonnets and going out without veils is strongly denounced, but while veils are easid to be still more indicating the course of seit-ricinance, and the calcinating and some the late tille of a new book by Madame tolay look of this city. It will doubtless create a greater seast on the beauty play and recipies for the ARTS OF BEAUTY.

distinctly seen in the almost total abandonment of lavish and reckless expenditure; very few costly luxuries are in demand, and dressmakers complain that bills which formerly approached from three to five hundred dollars for completing summer outfits, are now limited to less than one-sixth of that sum. A few rich tollettee which were preparing for Saratoga we have had an opportunity of examining. They were made at Granis's Baraan, for the beautiful Mrs. Maller of this city and her charming daughter.

One was a fine white grenadine, with three flounces of scarlet uncut velvet, and plain body, a Raphaed, without lining. A mail searf mantelet of gulpure, in medallion pattern, and terminating in two not very deep flounces; was lined with Azol-green silk, that is, of course, only the searf part, and surmounted by a charming hat of white crape, ornamented with a very rich blonde, and a magnolia in all its foliage. This idea of binding searf mantelets of silk and lace with some fresh delicate color is quite new, and has a very recherch effect. Lace cloaks are also lined in the same manner, and are very imposing with the graceful pointed bood, ornamented with rich tassels.
